Thought for the Week

"When you choose to forgive those who have hurt you, you take away their power. - Anonymus

Thinking about Paris

Abraham is a common father to Jews, Christians and Muslims. Some think it was cruel that he had to set about sacrificing his son Issac until God intervened and asked him to sacrifice a sheep instead. It was quite common in those days for people to sacrifice humans to appease the gods they believed in. When things were really very difficult and the god's had to be both appeased and appealed to, well then you sacrificed that which was most valuable to you. For Abraham, it was his only son - that is until God intervened and told humanity it was not necessary to sacrifice human beings to appease him or to appeal to him. For Christians, God gave his own Son who was an innocent man sacrificed on the Cross by those who were too righteous to see his true goodness. For God, the sacrifice of His own Son was the most perfect sacrifice, meaning that no other sacrifice, particularly of humans beings, was or is necessary. Most, if not all, major world faiths do not hold that it is necessary to sacrifice human beings to appease or appeal to their God.

"Eternal life can mean utter reverence for life itself." Seamus Heaney, Soul on the Washing Line, Pg 126.

MUSINGS

Today we honour Christ under the title of 'King'; but today's Gospel reminds us that this is not of the conventional kind. Indeed, a beautiful Scottish text called the 'Hospitality Prayer' reminds us that Christ often comes in a very different guise: 'I saw a stranger yesterday. I put food for him in the eating place; drink for him in the drinking place; music in the listening place. And in the sacred name of the Trinity he blessed myself and my house, my possessions and my people; and the lark said as she was singing that it is often, often, often Christ comes in the form of a stranger'.

Salvador Ryan, St Patrick's College, Maynooth (Intercom Magazine)
