THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"Laughter is an instant vacation" Milton Berle

Taught By A Fisherman.

Some years ago an Irish Missionary priest was assigned to a parish in the Northern part of the Philippines. It was a coastal town and was renowned for its breathtaking scenery and spectacular sunsets. Fishermen went out every morning and evening to catch fish for themselves and to sell in the local market. He tells his story of an occasion when he met a fisherman while walking on the beach. He was dragging a net along the shoreline. The priest watched him for a while and as he didn't seem to be catching anything, he decided to ask him if he would like his net blessed in the hope that he might catch some fish. He was delighted, as most Filipinos are to have anything blessed.

After the blessing he asked him what religion he was. He said 'Catholic'. He had never attended Mass or the Sacraments, but he prayed all the time. He didn't know the Our Father or the Hail Mary. He queried him about what he did when he prayed, he answered by saying that he talked and listened to God.

This man was poor, wore torn clothes, he had probably never been to school. He asked the fisherman what he spoke to God about? He said he spoke about his family, his poverty, about having a better life, peace and many other things.

Then he asked him how he listened to God. He said, in the waves of the sea, in the wind that blows, in the people he met and in the events of his life. He continued that he prayed when he got up in the morning, when he went fishing, while he was fishing, on his way home and before going to sleep.

The Missionary said that he had never met anyone who prayed so much and so well.

The final question the Missionary put to him was how where he learned to pray in this way? He told him that his eight year old daughter taught him. She had been taught by a catechist in the Public School [State run] in their place.

Did he catch more fish after the Missionary's blessing? He wasn't sure but he definitely caught the Missionary. How can we in our own simple way be fishers of people in our own community and in the world?

Ireland's Most Famous Man.

I'm sure that most people would agree that Daniel O'Connell known as the Liberator would rank as Ireland's most famous person. The main street in the City of Dublin is called after him and his monument overlooking O'Connell Bridge is a tribute of the people to the huge contribution he made to the Emancipation of Ireland in the nineteenth century.

Before he died in May 1847 in Genoa he asked that his body be given to Ireland, his heart to Rome and his soul to God. As we know the round tower in Glasnevin Cemetery is the memorial placed on his grave. His heart lies in the Irish College in Rome. The memorial in the Irish College enclosing the heart of Daniel O'Connell was erected by his great friend Charles Bianconi, who before the coming of railways set up the transportation system in Ireland which was in itself an extraordinary tribute to Bianconi's abilities. Bianconi commissioned an Italian Sculptor, Giovanni Benzone to undertake this work which depicts Daniel O'Connell refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance in the House of Commons in the English Parliament.

In my recent stay in the Irish College it brought back a memory of St. Audoen's Church in High Street in Dublin where I was a priest for seven years. There we had a beautiful statue of Our Lady and it was the work of the same sculptor. This is interesting because the Church was opened in the same year of 1847 in which Daniel O'Connell died. I wonder is this statue in St. Audoen's the gift of Charles Biaconi in memory of his friend? It is also interesting that the bell which was commissioned to be rung at the Funeral of Daniel O'Connell in Glasnevin Cemetery was then erected in St. Audoen's.

Does anyone know of any work in Ireland by Giovanni Benzone who was a distinguished Italian Sculptor in the nineteenth century and his work can be found in many Churches and Museums throughout the world.
